He helps clients obtain, protect, and enforce their intellectual property rights, whether through internal best practices, state and federal court, or agency proceedings.

Adam's experience spans numerous industries, including software, semiconductors, telecommunications, consumer electronics, manufacturing, and biotechnology.

He brings a unique ability to understand and leverage the perspectives of the innovator and the judiciary. Before law school, Adam completed a Master of Science degree focused on the emerging field of quantum computing. He worked with countless scientists, engineers, and researchers—all asking novel questions and solving technically difficult problems. Later, Adam worked for federal trial and appellate judges and gained invaluable experience seeing litigation from the judiciary's perspective.

Before joining Holland and Hart, Adam clerked for the United States Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit and the United States District Court for the Central District of California.
