

Andrea Anderson

Partner
303.473.2861
Boulder
aanderson@hollandhart.com

Confusing CBD: Post-Legalization Trademark Strategies for Food and Beverage Marks

Insight — 05/07/2020

This article originally appeared in World Trademark Review online, May 7, 2020.

As the US legal landscape evolves to consider legalizing cannabidiol (CBD)-containing products at the federal level, it is possible that the USPTO may soon recognize trademarks for foods containing CBD as registrable. This will open the floodgates for CBD-related trademark applications.

In this World Trademark Review guest piece, Holland & Hart partners Andrea Anderson, whose practice focuses on strategic trademark counsel, and Lee Gray who counsels food and beverage producers and product manufacturers on regulatory compliance, recalls and product litigation, provide a background on the legal status of CBD in food and beverage products and offer insight, based on current data, into how the USPTO may approach examination of CBD marks once all federal legal prohibitions are lifted.

Please click here to read the full article: Confusing CBD: post-legalisation trademark strategies for food and beverage marks. (Subscription needed).

This publication is designed to provide general information on pertinent legal topics. The statements made are provided for educational purposes only. They do not constitute legal or financial advice nor do they necessarily reflect the views of Holland & Hart LLP or any of its attorneys other than the author(s). This publication is not intended to create an attorney-client relationship between you and Holland & Hart LLP. Substantive changes in the law subsequent to the date of this publication might affect the analysis or commentary. Similarly, the analysis may differ depending on the jurisdiction or circumstances. If you have specific questions as to the application of the law to your activities, you should seek the advice of your legal counsel.