

Amanda Marston

Associate
303.473.2712
Boulder
anmarston@hollandhart.com

Hope Hamilton

Partner
303.473.4822
Denver, Boulder
hihamilton@hollandhart.com

Lessons from GRUYERE: A Roadmap for Proving Genericness from the TTAB

Insight — 09/06/2020

IPWatchdog.com

This article originally appeared in the Sept. 6, 2020 online edition of IPWatchdog.com, an online Intellectual Property Journal.

“Although this decision is not monumental, it is instructive. Evidence of consumer perception goes a long way, but when the perception pervades governmental definitions and documents, it makes the evidence that much stronger.”

Following the widely discussed BOOKING.COM Supreme Court genericness case, the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board (Board) took up a genericness case of its own. Int'l. Dairy et al. v. Interprofessionnel du Gruyère addresses whether a geographic certification mark for GRUYERE is generic for cheese or eligible for registration as a certification mark.

In addition to providing an extensive roadmap for how to prove a genericness claim, the case may also be of interest to food and beverage industry applicants seeking to obtain and enforce certification marks.

Please click here to read the full article: Lessons from GRUYERE: A Roadmap for Proving Genericness from the TTAB.

About the Authors:

Partner Hope Hamilton and Associate Amanda Marston practice at Holland & Hart LLP in Boulder, Colorado. Both specialize in providing a full spectrum of trademark and copyright services, including comprehensive counseling, strategic advice, enforcement, and litigation.

This publication is designed to provide general information on pertinent legal topics. The statements made are provided for educational purposes only. They do not constitute legal or financial advice nor do they necessarily reflect the views of Holland & Hart LLP or any of its attorneys other than the author(s). This publication is not intended to create an attorney-client relationship between you and Holland & Hart LLP.

Substantive changes in the law subsequent to the date of this publication might affect the analysis or commentary. Similarly, the analysis may differ depending on the jurisdiction or circumstances. If you have specific questions as to the application of the law to your activities, you should seek the advice of your legal counsel.