

Todd Lessley

Todd Lessley is the Vice President of Population Health at the Salud Family Health Centers (Salud), a Federally Qualified Health Center in Colorado. Todd provides leadership to the organization on methods of leveraging technology and care coordination models to achieve the triple aim. As a rising leader in healthcare, Todd is the co-chairman of a performance improvement advisory committee, a stakeholder group that provides direction to the Colorado Department of Healthcare Policy and Financing on statewide ACO initiatives. Todd believes that access to data is essential for continuous process improvement and applies this principle in his direction of cross departmental quality improvement projects. Prior to his role as Vice President Todd lead Salud's involvement with Colorado Medicaid's Accountable Care Collaborative, a Medicaid ACO designed to effectively coordinate care for over 1 million lives. Todd is an advocate for Community Health Centers and believes that the future of health care must focus ensuring clients receive the right care, at the right time in the right setting. When Todd can escape from healthcare operations, he enjoys spending time in the Rocky Mountains with his wife and 2 year old golden retriever.
